To whom it may concern,

I am privileged to write in support of a student of mine, Collin Olsen. He is currently enrolled in my Math 1050 class, a College Algebra class taught concurrently with SLCC. I am impressed with his dedication to the math class even though he is heavily involved with other responsibilities. His attendance is perfect; all homework is completed on time, his test scores are the highest in the class, and he finds time to help his peers.

I have been aware of Collin's service projects in many areas. His dedication to helping organizations, community groups, and individuals should be commended. As a teacher at Cottonwood High, I have witnessed his hard work in leading clubs, excelling in Science, Math, and Computer awards; and in organizing and handling the school web page.

Collin is not only intelligent and hard-working, but organized, easy-going, and truly responsive to all demands given him. I have no doubt that Collin would excel in whatever endeavor he tries, and I can think of no one better than him to receive a scholarship. I recommend Collin with absolute confidence.

Sincerely,
